A PERIOD OF ADJUSTMENT
What It’s Like for the Family When the Guide Dog Team Comes Home

“No!” That’s a word that gets said a lot when a guide dog team comes home for the first time, but it’s not directed at the guide dog. Family members have to adjust to having a new dog in the house, and yes, they will need some training and time to adjust.

When they reach down to pet or hug or distract the dog in some way while in harness, they are going to hear, “No, he’s working.” When they ask if they can take the guide dog out to play fetch the answer again will be, “No.” When excited children want to show the dog to their friends and tell them to come and pet him, the guide dog user will have to remind their well-intentioned family members, “No, not while he’s in harness.”

When a guide dog comes into the house, it’s difficult to not treat it as...well, a dog. Several of our graduates have spouses, children or co-workers anxiously waiting at home for them and the new guide dog after graduation. And, even though family members know that the guide dog is their loved ones’ new eyes, they don’t always know or remember the rules and need to be reminded from time to time – even after the period of adjustment. This is especially important during the first several weeks that the team is home. Even though they’ve been working together and forming a close bond at school, at home the guide dog team will cement that bond. For about the first month, family members and any co-workers are to have very little to no contact with the dog. After awhile though, when the bond is well-established and only when the guide dog is out of harness, will there start to be some forms of interaction with the other household members. If the guide dog user works outside the home, the same rules apply.

It’s a different experience for every guide dog team and their family as you will read.

When Agustin Moreno arrived home with his first guide dog, Liza, in 1993, he knew she would be a welcome addition to the family and a tremendous help to him with his mobility and keeping up with his three children. He just never could have guessed how much help.

“At first my wife was concerned about having a big dog around our daughter Judith, who was just 18-months-old at the time,” said Agustin. “She didn’t know what to expect and how having a guide dog would change life for the family.”

It turns out there was no need to worry. Liza quickly found her place in the family. Working hard with Agustin while in harness, and out of harness serving as best friend to sons Sergio and Ivan. But it was daughter Judith that Liza “took care of” when she was off duty. “If I needed to find Judith and Liza was out of harness, I knew I just needed to find Liza,” recalled Agustin.

Agustin and Liza worked as a team for 11 years. She was truly a part of the family. “When my daughter Judith was old enough to talk, if someone asked me how many kids I had, I would answer two boys and one girl. Judith would correct me and say, ‘You have two daughters, remember? You have Liza.’

Throughout the year and across the country, fundraising events are held with all proceeds earmarked for GDA. We’d like to take a “Paws for Thanks” and recognize these organizations for their support of GDA.

said. “Judith would correct me and say, ‘You have two daughters, remember? You have Liza.’”

Agustin’s current guide dog, Shadow, has also become a member of the family. Since Shadow is a male, Judith is once again the only daughter and Agustin now has “three sons.”

Recent graduate Laura Beickman answered frankly the question about how she and her family are adjusting to having a guide dog in the family: “We’re still adjusting,” she said. It’s been less than a year since the team graduated and Laura returned home with Karbon. Greeting the team were Laura’s husband, Kim, and their three children, Thiler, Bianca, and Nethaniel, and Heidi, the family’s five-year-old lab/German shepherd mix.

While Laura anticipated she’d have to work with her dog-loving husband and kids about how to treat her guide dog, she also had to consider just how to introduce Heidi to Karbon.

Since it’s Heidi’s house, Laura and her husband decided the two would meet on neutral territory – the park. Kim picked up the team from the airport, dropped them off at a park close to home, and went to pick up Heidi. “Out of harness Karbon is very playful and wanted to play hard with Heidi right away,” recalled Laura. “Once we had Karbon in harness and Heidi on her leash, we walked them side by side. They would glance at each other now and again, but did very well.”

Laura happily reported that her family remembers the rules, most of the time, and that Heidi has welcomed Karbon to the family.

When Richard Guzman brought home his first guide dog Pismo, his three teenage children, Richard, Veronica, and Larissa, had a lot of questions for him. “Is he going to chew the shoes?” “Will he knock over the trash can?” “Do we have to feed him?” “Did you give him water?” To which Richard always replied, “Yes.”

From the beginning it was clear that Richard’s first guide dog Pismo and now his second guide dog, Evan, are Richard’s dogs, but family members, especially Sylvia, have always made sure that Richard was taking as good of care of his dogs as they were of him.

Christy Moon recalls coming home with her guide dog Walker and going out to dinner for the first time with her husband, John, and their three kids, Paul and twin daughters, Jamie and Jessica. “Before they would assist me, but this time they just all got of the car, stood back, and let Walker guide me,” she said. “It all seemed very natural.”

For Christy having a guide dog didn’t seem like an adjustment, but her family had to adjust to seeing the reaction from strangers when they accompanied her. “At first it was exciting for them, now it’s just part of every day.”

Like most dog loving families – Christy and her family have two pet dogs – it was hard for her family to not treat Walker like a pet. “Sometimes I have to scold John for talking to the dog when he’s in harness and working,” she admitted. “And my daughter can’t help herself and will come up and kiss Walker when he’s in harness. I feel bad sometimes, but I know they understand that distracting Walker when he’s working could put our safety at risk.”

Christy and her family have adjusted well to having a new family member. “Honestly, the biggest adjustment my family faced was having me away from home for a month at school during our training,” she said.
MAKE YOUR DOG A PART OF YOUR NEW YEAR’S RESOLUTION

Much has been written about the health benefits of having a dog — both physical and mental. Walking your dog means you will also be getting more exercise. More exercise contributes to a healthy lifestyle and possibly losing a few pounds. In addition to your physical well-being, studies also show that a dog can contribute to your mental well-being. With New Year’s and the resolutions that inevitably come with it around the corner, we’d like to offer several health tips to get your dog and you off to a healthy and happy start to the New Year!

The Nose Knows — Do You? Is a wet nose a sign that a dog is healthy? The short answer: not necessarily. There are many reasons a dog will have a dry, warm nose that have nothing to do with his overall health. A dehydrated dog, though healthy, will have a dry nose. A dog sitting in a hot place may also have a dry nose temporarily. When you look at your dog’s nose, look for nasal discharge. If your dog’s nose runs, the mucus should be clear. If your dog is producing bubbly, thick, yellow, green or even black mucus, see your veterinarian. If your dog’s nose is cracked and you see scabs or sores, your dog may have a skin disorder. Ask your veterinarian to check it out.

Look Into My Eyes — A dog’s eyes should be clear and bright and free of any red spots, heavy discharge, debris, or other abnormal conditions. Eye infections often start as just a little bit of ooze coming from the corners of the eyes. Eye infections are contagious to other pets as well as humans. It is important to catch these and clear them up early. Some breeds are prone to a slight eye discharge (your veterinarian can tell you what to expect). Wiping around the eyes daily with water-soaked cotton will help to keep the eyes and the area around them clean and free of debris.

Listen Up — Check your dog’s ears at least once a month. Long-haired dogs should be checked more frequently, since they are more prone to ear problems. To maintain good ear health between vet visits, gently wipe the surface of your dog’s external ear with a cotton square moistened with mineral oil or even a baby wipe. When cleaning check to see if there is a waxy build up, excessive matting of hair in the external ear, and/or redness or inflammation around the ear. It is also a good idea to actually smell your dog’s ears. The presence of a sour, cheesy odor is usually indicative of a potential problem. If you think that a problem may be present or developing, consultation with a veterinarian is imperative as soon as possible.

My, What Big, Beautiful Teeth You Have — Routine dental care is essential to your pet’s overall good health. Build up of tartar can cause inflamed, swollen gums and secondary infections that can lead to serious health problems. Dogs, one to three years old, should have their teeth brushed once a week. Dogs over three years old should have their teeth brushed more often. Use a toothbrush and toothpaste made especially for dogs — toothpaste made for humans can be toxic for dogs. The toothbrushes have long handles to allow you to brush the dog’s back teeth and specially-formulated toothpastes for dogs are pleasant to taste and can be swallowed without upsetting your dog’s stomach. For information on cleaning your pet’s teeth, consult your veterinarian.

The Pet-icure — Keeping your dog’s nails clipped to the proper length is essential to his health and comfort. In order to avoid the “quick” of the nails, have your veterinarian or groomer show you how to clip your dog’s nails, or have a professional groomer do it. Check your dog’s nails at least every other week, so they don’t get too long. If you hear a scratching or clicking noise as your pet walks across the uncarpeted floors or on concrete, his nails are too long!

See Spot Run (or Walk) — Just like exercise contributes to our health, it also contributes to your dog’s healthiness and happiness. Your dog needs daily exercise to stay healthy and free from illness, and to avoid putting on weight and becoming obese. Exercise gets the heart pumping, the blood flowing, and the muscles working. Take your dog for a hike in the hills, a jog on the beach, a swim in the lake, or just a stroll in the neighborhood, and you too will be getting the physical and mental benefits of being outdoors and moving!

The Doctor Will See You Now — Keeping your dog healthy between vet visits is often a matter of knowing what to look for, but should not replace your dog’s annual exam. It is most often during these exams that a veterinarian can pick up the early warning signs of a serious problem that will affect the dog in the future. Serious problems can often be corrected or at least slowed in progress when they are detected early.

NEW EMPLOYEES & NEW OPPORTUNITIES

Please join us in welcoming a new employee to the GDA staff and in congratulating a long-time employee.

Steve Williams – Administration (part time)
Rhonda Bissell – Executive Assistant

Rhonda will continue to handle gift and estate planning in addition to her new role as Executive Assistant.

“I think the biggest adjustment for many of my family members, with the exception of my husband, was the idea that this new dog would allow me to be more independent. For my husband and his dog, it meant that there were twice as many squeaky toys around the house.”

DONATING FREQUENT FLYER MILES

Our GDA students come from all over the United States and Canada, which means for many of them their 28-day training at the school begins and ends on an airplane. We are able to cover 100% of all students’ travel expenses, including airline tickets, by “purchasing” their tickets using frequent flier miles that have been donated to the school.

Two airlines participate in the program: United Airlines and Northwest Airlines. If you or someone you know have unused miles with either of these airlines’ programs, they can be donated directly to GDA to help support our program.

To donate your miles, have your account number ready and contact:

United Mileage Plus Customer Service: (800) 421-4655
Northwest WorldPerks: (800) 327-2881 or www.nwa.com/worldperks.

“PLANNING” TO GIVE TO GDA

YEAR-ROUND GIVING ONE MONTH AT A TIME

Many of our supporters donate to GDA monthly using our convenient automatic donation program. At the beginning of each month we automatically charge your credit card in the amount you specified at the beginning of the year. At year’s end you will receive a thank you letter with a donation total for your tax records.
