my left eye, I began to panic," he says.
Over the next $3-4$ weeks, Eugene's sight rapidly deteriorated. The small pieces of blurred vision gradually became one giant blur. Struggling to get appointments during the Covid shutdown, Eugene was eventually diagnosed with Glaucoma - his life forever changed.
At the time, Eugene had a successful career as a designer at Fandango, where he led his own design team. "I would have never thought this would happen to me, especially in the middle of my life," Eugene states. While his employers were highly supportive throughout his vision loss, providing him with accessible screens and keyboards, it was ultimately too much. After almost 20 years as a designer, Euguene made the difficult decision to resign at the end of 2022.
"It totally changed my life," Eugene explains. Even little hobbies he enjoyed, such as going to the hardware store, became more challenging than leisurely. "I love the hardware store. I could spend half a day there just picking up random stuff!" he says with a smile as he reminisces.
Eugene first heard about our guide dog program through one of his wife's patients, who volunteers at GDA|TLC. Once accepted into the program, Eugene couldn't wait to take advantage of the opportunity. He recalls his initial experience in class, "For the first few days, we are training with an imaginary dog (JUNO)." A process that can be monotonous for students yearning to meet their exciting new partners. It isn't until the third day of class that students are finally matched with their dogs.

"The trainers sit you down in your room, and you can hear them knock on the door as they introduce other students to their dogs... and I am one of the last doors," he recalls as he waited anxiously. "And then she comes in, and you are just overjoyed!" he smiles wide, "This is reality, a living being who is going to guide me! My forever friend!" Opal, a Yellow Labrador retriever, has been with Eugene nearly 24/7 since. He remembers feeling speechless and delighted.
His experience with the trainers remains just as memorable. "I call them friends because they've helped me so much, personally and professionally." Eugene continues, "I remember the first time I got to walk with her, and just feeling her lead me was an amazing experience because it wasn't me shuffling anymore. It's just automatic for her to go around obstacles... it's such an incredible feeling!"
"Being able to take my regular routes [with Opal] was really incredible! It made me feel free. It made me feel confident," he recollects with a smile. Before matching with Opal, Eugene struggled to ride the bus alone and find his seat. "With [Opal], it's as if she's a person with you- like having your friend with you, and it just makes things a little more comfortable," he explains.
Improving his mobility isn't the only thing Opal has done for Eugene. She's done something else as well.
"She's helped me get over this feeling of shame that I had, maybe because I felt like a burden to society. Not working made me feel useless like I couldn't contribute. Opal has shown me that isn't true." Petting her gently by his side, he says, "She depends on me, and I depend on her."

A Baker's Dozen

WRITTEN BY CAROLE ROSNER

"Puppy, puppy, puppy!" we call as 13 puppies come running from around the corner. The " R " litter, a boisterous and adorable furry baker's dozen, spent a week this past September learning and socializing in GDA|TLC's Puppy Head Start Program. Hundreds of litters have gone through head start over the last nine years, with this family of 13 being one of the largest.

Training at GDA|TLC starts on day one for these future helpers. Brave individuals, called "Puppy-Huggers," begin holding and socializing the puppies while they're still in the nursery. Once they're four weeks old, the puppies are big enough to venture out of their whelping bays for pre-school. Volunteers work with the puppies for an hour hour each day, socializing them to different sites, sounds, and feels. This continues almost every day until they begin Head Start at 7 weeks.
When they come to Head Start, they are in a new kennel area with a much more room to play and adventure. They have volunteers with them all day from Monday to Friday. Lead Head Start volunteer Diana Janke says there are approximately 50 volunteers on the roster, and I'm thrilled to be part of the group. Why? Because during a three-and-a-half-hour shift, Head Start is one of the most exuberant, frantic, exhausting, and loving places

I've ever been. Although the puppies can be very vocal and very messy, being a volunteer is just so much fun.

Dogs are in every corner--playing tug of war with a litter mate over a braided rope toy, rolling around in a giant plastic tunnel, and escaping under a chair for some alone time. The puppies don't get their official names until they go home, so we volunteers use their colored or patterned collars to identify them. "Where's Pink," "What's Gray doing?" "Look what Rainbow is doing now."
It's incredible to watch giant paws and little bodies clumsily find their place in the world. The puppies' sense of smell may be keen, but their sense of balance still needs some work -all climbing, chasing, squealing, and skidding through the kennels. Personalities among the puppies differ litter by litter, but we can tell who is shy or mischievous within minutes. The many slides, steps, tables, and ladders are meant to build confidence, initiate play, and give them a place to romp around.

These puppies are fast, frisky, and bold.
They love to be cuddled, but not for too long. They have other places to go and things to explore. Puppies frolic in their water bowls, are mesmerized by a bee, and can get cranky with each other. Anything left on the ground is of interest, and they discover things to eat in every nook and cranny. We serve their meals in individual crates, and they loudly let everyone know when it's feeding time.
These puppies are quick studies, and at their young age, they already understand that treats are on the way when we say "nice" in a highpitched voice. We also work with the puppies on recall, tie-down, crate training, and body handling. Diana explained that the Head Start experience is more like what the dogs will do
